Presses Claim For Reparations For Nazi Abuse

The Government of Israel asked the United States for $150,000,000 in grant-in-aid for the period of July 1, 1951, to June 30, 1952, Abba S. Eban, Israel's Ambassador to Washington announced.

The request was made in a note delivered personally by Mr. Eban to Secretary of State Dean Acheson. At the same time Mr. Eban said he handed Secretary Acheson another note containing Israel's claim for reparations against Germany amounting to $1,500,000,000.

Ambassador Eban said, referring to the grant-in-aid request, that Israel must make good her shortage of foreign exchange to maintain her standard of living, which has already been greatly reduced. Mr. Eban said that, as of the end of 1950, more than 510,000 immigrants had entered Israel, increasing the country's over-all population by 78 per cent within a period of two and one-half years. An additional 500,000 new immigrants are expected within the next four years, thus trebling the population by the end of 1954, according to the New York Times.

By receiving these immigrants Israel had solved problems that would otherwise fall on international agencies and other Governments, Mr. Eban said. He added that the difficulty of financing this population increase had been aggravated by Israel's defense burdens.

Israel's reparations claims, Mr. Eban said, were related both to the losses suffered by Jews at the hands of the Germans and to the financial cost of rehabilitation of Jewish victims from countries formerly under Nazi control. The number, he said, would ultimately involve about 500,000 persons.

In its note the Israel Government said it trusted that the United States would accept the justice of its reparations claim, and added:

"It would urgently request that the occupying powers should not hand over full powers to any German Government without express reservations having been made for the payment of reparations to Israel."

Ohio Rubber Firm To Set Up Plant In Israel

Beginning of construction on a major tire and rubber factory in Israel, the result of joint financing by Israeli labor groups and United States business interests, was announced at the law office of Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., 598 Madison Avenue, in New York.

The new venture, which will operate as the Alliance Tire and Rubber Company, Ltd., will operate with the aid of technical services supplied by the Dayton (Ohio) Rubber Company, one of the largest tire and tube manufacturers in the country, of which A. L. Freedlander is president. The Dayton Company's services, as provided for in a special contract, will include personnel training and establishment of production facilities and methods.

Details of the project, which backers hope may become the nucleus of a full-fledged rubber industry in Israel, were outlined by Arthur Taubman, chairman of the new company, who also is president of the Advance Stores Company of Roanoke, Va.

Mr. Roosevelt, Democratic-Liberal Representative from New York, and Jerome H. Adler, both of the law firm of Roosevelt, Freidin and Littauer, handled legal affairs of the organization, which is an Israeli corporation. Mr. Roosevelt indicated that his inter-

Sarnoff Gets World Brotherhood Award

David Sarnoff, chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, appealing for brotherhood and peace, said "the future of our civilization and mankind itself depends upon people everywhere realizing the truth that they are all akin."

Mr. Sarnoff spoke at a world brotherhood dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York, sponsored by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. Mr. Sarnoff and Clarence E. Pickett, secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, received the seminary's first World Brotherhood Awards for their contributions to the ideal of human fellowship.

The citation to Mr. Sarnoff was "in recognition of his scientific contributions that have brought men everywhere closer in mind and spirit," while that given to Mr. Pickett was for his indefatigable and devout humanitarian service to his brethren at home and abroad regardless of color, nation or creed." Both citations were presented by Dr. Louis Finkelstein, president of the seminary.

Mr. Sarnoff warned that if men are to become the masters rather than the slaves of science "we must learn to use its powers with good purpose; and that purpose must be the well-being of our fellow men."

"What is needed in short," he continued, "is for all of us — you and our fellow men everywhere — to recognise and give practical application to the ideal of brotherhood. I do not pretend this is an easy task, but I am convinced it is a necessary one. To put it bluntly, we have no choice. Either all men learn to live and work together, or all men will perish together."

Mr. Sarnoff noted that all the natural sciences "point up the essential oneness of mankind" which, he said, is the same conclusion as is reached by religion. Science and religion, he said, are partners in man's constant effort to learn the truth about himself and the universe, reports the New York Herald Tribune. The task of the present generation, he said, is to remove the blindfolds of ignorance and envy which keep individuals from recognizing that despite differences, all men "are truly of the same dust."

Discussing scientific progress, he predicted that television will eventually span the ocean, and thus may become a strong force for achieving world peace. He supported American rearmament saying that peace can be achieved only through strength, but emphasised that in addition to guns, planes and tanks America must establish brotherhood at home as a step towards promoting it throughout the world.

Mr. Sarnoff noted that he had recommended to Presidents Roosevelt and Truman plans for an international broadcasting service which subsequently materialized as "The Voice of America." Later he made a similar recommendation to United Nations officials, he said, resulting in the "Voice of the United Nations."

"Today, both of those broadcast services are striking examples of the power of radio to reach afar in an effort to cultivate greater understanding among the free peoples of the world," he said. "It is my earnest hope that the range of these broadcasts will be extended, and that people everywhere — even behind the Iron Curtain — will be permitted by their governments to listen to them."

When television spans the ocean, he said, the United States will have a program that may be called "The Voice and Vision of the U.S.A." The scientific miracles accomplished in recent years, Mr. Sarnoff said, are only the beginning.

"We stand today on the threshold of a new era, bright with promise," he said. "If man turns his thoughts towards the possibilities of science for peace instead of war, all the inventions I mentioned can be used to make the earth so fruitful and life so pleasant for all men, that there will be little cause for envy. In this new climate we have a real opportunity to root out old hatreds and build a real brotherhood of mankind."

Mr. Sarnoff denied that it was paradoxical to speak of guns and other weapons in terms of world brotherhood, says the New York Herald Tribune. "As long as we know in our hearts that these things are produced to defend freedom rather than to destroy it there is no paradox," he explained. "In the light of world conditions we must be prepared to preserve this society based on the freedom and dignity of the individual and respect for the rights of others.

"Peace can be achieved only through strength. The world has little respect for weakness. For weakness too frequently is associated with fear, and fear is not an attribute of either peace or brotherhood."

He urged that a great part of America's mobilization should be a spiritual one, asserting that the world is ready for such a mobilization.

Was Adviser To Railroads On Labor Policy

Elisha M. Friedman, consulting economist, author, lecturer and statistician, died in New York in Mount Sinai Hospital after an operation. His age was 61. He was a brother of Dr. E. David Friedman, Professor of Neurology and department head at the New York University College of Medicine.

Mr. Friedman was a student of railroad affairs and was frequently called to give expert testimony before Senate and House committees on taxation, railroads and profit-sharing. He had also engaged in labor and management relations.

Among the many countries whose railroad systems he studied were Great Britain and Soviet Russia. These visits were on behalf of American railroads, utilities and trade associations.

Mr. Friedman was born in New York City. He was graduated cum laude from City College in 1908. During World War I he was a statistician for the War Industry Board.

After the war he joined the War Finance Corporation as a dollar-a-year man. From 1919 to 1920 he was a member of the Economic Liaison Committee. During this period he was also a consulting economist for the Treasury Department.

A prolific writer on economic and Zionist subjects, he wrote many magazine and newspaper articles and was the author of six books. In 1932 he wrote "Russia in Transition," a survey of Soviet labor. Other books included "Labor and Reconstruction in Europe," "International Commerce and Reconstruction" and "Survival or Extinction."

Mr. Friedman lectured on finance at New York University from 1920 to 1929 and at the New School for Social Research from 1927 to 1930. He was on the organizing committee of the Amalgamated Bank with such labor leaders as the late Sidney Hillman and Leo Wolman. He also was a member of the American Association for Labor Legislation.

In 1941 he was consulted by various railroads to work out a practical labor policy. He suggested wage adjustments to meet changes in the cost of living plus liberal profit-sharing but at the time was against any permanent wage increase.

During World War II he was chairman of an economic advisory group of European and Canadian officials, bankers and economists who conferred with United States officials on problems relating to the war, price fixing, labor, the International Bank, taxation and war loans, says the New York Herald Tribune.

He was a member of the American Economic Committee for Palestine. He was a member of the board and one of the founders of the American Friends of the Hebrew University in Palestine and was also on the finance committees of the Palestine Endowment Fund and the Hadassah Medical Organization.

Mr. Friedman was unmarried. Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Miriam D. Friedman; three brothers, Samuel, Abraham and Dr. E. David Friedman, and one sister, Mrs. Pearl Koenigsberg.

Jews, Negroes Say U.S. Congress Lax About Bias

Sharp criticism of both houses of Congress for failure to take action to eliminate "those patterns of discrimination and segregation which deny to many Americans that equality of opportunity and right which is the essence of our democratic system" was made in a joint report by the American Jewish Congress and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The report, "Civil Rights in the United States in 1950: A Balance Sheet of Group Relations," was made public by Dr. David Petegorsky, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, and Walter White, executive secretary of the Association.

In accusing the Eighty-first Congress for making a "political football" of the civil rights issue, the report said: "The Eighty-first Congress, which came to office in an election generally regarded as a clear-cut victory for the civil rights program, belied the promises of both the Democratic and Republican 1948 platforms by failing to enact any major civil rights measure."

Dr. Petegorsky and Mr. White maintained that only a few Senators and Representatives manifested any regard for civil liberties or inter-group relations and their connection with the position of the United States in international affairs, says the New York Times. The report asserted that no substantial action had been taken by the Eighty-first Congress on the poll tax or anti-lynching bills, the prohibition of segregation in the armed forces or any bills for self-government or equality in the District of Columbia.

Forest In Israel To Be U.S. Memorial To Slain

In tribute to 6,000,000 Jews who were killed by the Nazis, American Jews will be asked to plant 5,000,000 trees in the "Forest of the Six Million" in the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv corridor in Israel. Jews throughout the world will be asked to plant the additional 1,000,000 saplings.

Details of the project were announced in New York at the Biltmore Hotel by Representative Emanuel Celler, chairman of the national advisory board of the Jewish National Fund, the land-buying arm of the World Zionist Organization.

Representative Abraham J. Multer said that the planting of the trees did not involve a campaign for funds, pointing to the priority of the United Jewish Appeal and the forthcoming flotation of the Israel bond issue of $500,000,000. It was estimated that the planting of the 5,000,000 saplings would cost $7,500,000.

Trees were pledged by representatives of the following organizations: Hadassah, 300,000; the Zionist Organization of America, 800,000; Jewish Workers' Alliance, 150,000; Pioneer Women, 75,000; World Federation of Polish Jews, 50,000; Mizrachi Women, 75,000; and Friends of Congressman Abraham J. Multer, 25,000.

Dr. Harold J. Levine, president of the fund, said that "the Jews of America, responding to the call from Jerusalem, will stand solidly with the Jews of the world and the citizens of Israel in particular in the effort to establish a living memorial in Israel that will forever keep green the memory of our martyred six million."

N.Y. Home For Aged Is First Enterprise Of Sephardic Jews In Centuries

Open house was held in Brooklyn, N. Y., at the Home for Aged Sephardic Jews. When the Home opens May 27 it will become, according to its officers and trustees, the first such community enterprise undertaken by Sephardic Jewry in its centuries-old history.

The home, at 2265 Cropsey Avenue, will accommodate sixty-five to seventy aged men and women. It was established by a fund of $250,000 which was raised among 20,000 Sephardic families in New York City, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Sephardic Jews are descendants of Jews who were expelled from Spain and Portugal during the Inquisition in the latter part of the fifteenth century. At that time they fled Christian persecution to settle in Greece, Turkey and other countries of the Levant and North Africa. Their descendants retain Spanish as their chief language.

Unlike the Ashkenazim, or Jews of Northern European descent, they do not speak Yiddish, and their diet is of a more highly spiced and Oriental type than that of their northern brothers. Most of them speak Hebrew and with a melodious accent which sets them apart from the Ashkenazim.

Although the Sephardim are now a small minority of the American Jewish population, the first Jewish community in North America was established in 1654, in what was then New Amsterdam, by refugee Sephardic Jews who came from Latin America. From that time until the mid-nineteenth century the Sephardim furnished most of the leadership for American Jews of every descent.

Merchants by tradition, the early settlers became noted shippers along the east coast. The oldest synagogue in the U. S. was dedicated in 1763 in Newport, R. I., by a Sephardic community which was formed there in 1658. The synagogue is now a national shrine. Many Sephardic Jews played prominent roles in the Revolutionary War. Among them was Gershom Mendes Seixas, who was the chief rabbi of the Sephardim at the time.

It was not until the 1850s that American Sephardic Jews gave up their position of leadership to the great influx of German and Polish Jews who furnished new leaders for American Jewry as a whole. Since that time the Sephardim have remained a peculiarly independent minority within a minority.

They are proudly members of Sephardim, yet some indication of their independence is seen in the fact that their New York community of 50,000 is divided into fifty-nine separate organizations, all of which are loosely united in the Central Sephardic Jewish Community of America.

Jacob Russo, woman's wear manufacturer, who led the campaign for the Home for the Aged, was asked why they had waited so long to establish any kind of Sephardic institution and why — in view of the delay — they needed one now.

"Simple," he said. "We need the home because our old people, when their families are gone, have to go to the regular Jewish homes. They speak different. They eat different. They are not happy. As to why it took so long: We are always busy. You can't ever get us together. Of course, you can't ever get us apart, either."

flat on one's face

"Know-how" is a popular phrase in these times — the western nations' industrial know-how is said to be their greatest hope. But it is not enough to know how to do a job. Doing it is what counts. Between knowing and doing there are usually a surprising number of opportunities for falling flat on one's face.

The textile industry in Canada, of which Dominion Textile is a part, has been practising for over a century to avoid falling flat on its face. While learning its job and doing it, the industry has become the largest employer of manufacturing labor in Canada and the payer of the largest manufacturing wage bill.

MAZOFF-ROSE

The wedding of Lauraine Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Rose, McGregor Avenue, to John Alfred Mazoff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mazoff, Wilder Avenue, took place at Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue chapel on March 20, at half-past five o'clock. Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white and silver satin brocade, the fitted bodice having long sleeves, and the skirt draping into a long, circular train. Her fingertip length veil of tulle illusion was fastened to a pleated tulle cap, and she carried a white Bible and white orchids. Mrs. Joseph Deckelbaum, as matron of honor, wore a gown of emerald-green satin, and a white flowered hat, and carried white gladioli blossoms. Peter Mazoff, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Martin Mazoff, Philip Milman, Franklin Levee, and Lazarus Cohen. Mrs. M. Fineberg played the wedding music. White and pink snapdragons formed the decorations. At a dinner in the Prince of Wales Salon of the Windsor Hotel, the bride's table, centred with the wedding cake, was arranged with white tulips, white and pink snapdragons, and white gladioli. The other tables had centerpieces of pink tulips, and white and pink snapdragons. Mrs. Rose, mother of the bride, received in a floor-length gown of parchment-colored satin, with a matching stole; and a hat of the same colour. Mrs. Mazoff, mother of the groom, wore a gown of Chantilly lace, with a matching hat. The bride and groom left to spend their honeymoon in Palm Beach, Florida. They will reside on Deacon Road. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Krokyn, uncle and aunt of the bride; and Mr. and Mrs. Allan Groffman, all of Brookline, Mass.; Mrs. Florence Tannenbaum, aunt of the bride, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Manashil, cousins of the groom, of Philadelphia, Pa., were present.

SAXE-POMERANTZ

The marriage of Miss Betty Pomerantz, daughter of Abraham Pomerantz, 3831 Girouard Avenue, and the late Mrs. Goldie Pomerantz, to Eli Saxe, son of Mrs. Eva Saxe, 86 Brunswick Avenue, Toronto, and the late Philip Saxe, took place in the chapel of Shaare Zion Synagogue, on March 18, at half-past four o'clock, Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen officiating, assisted by Cantor G. Berkovits and Cantor S. Miller. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white satin floor-length gown, having a round neckline, a tulle net yoke, with seed-pearl embroidery; long sleeves, with the same embroidery on the cuffs, a fitted bodice, and a very full skirt, with a long train. Her Juliet cap was of tulle, with a net finger-length veil, and she carried an ivory-covered bridal prayer book, with orchids and streamers. Mrs. Erwin Schild, of Toronto, sister of the groom, was matron of honor. She wore a satin dress, in American Beauty red, designed with a heart-shaped neckline, and short sleeves, with a full, cocktail-length skirt; and she had long, matching gloves, and a crown of flowers and tulle to match, and carried a cascade bouquet of pink carnations. Rabbi Erwin Schild, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. The choir sang "Because" during the ceremony. Seasonal flowers were used to decorated the synagogue. Receiving, Mrs. David Comm, sister of the bride, wore a pale-blue nylon marquisette gown, over light blue taffeta, designed with a horse-shoe neckline, and short sleeves, and a full, flared skirt, ankle-length. The taffeta slip under the dress was trimmed at the top with lace, which also filled out the edge of the neckline of the gown. Her hat was made of blue tulle veiling, with a crown of blue flowers; and she had a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Saxe, mother of the groom, wore a black velvet dress, made with a V-shaped neckline, and long sleeves, and an ankle-length skirt; also a matching hat, and corsage of red roses. # CLASS IN COOKERY

PASSOVER POTATO PUDDING

Beat the yolks of four eggs with a fork; add one-half cup sugar, and two tablespoons of grated, blanched almonds. Then add grated rind and juice of one-half lemon; and three large potatoes, which have been boiled until done and grated; one-quarter teaspoon salt. Lastly, fold in stiffly-beaten whites of four eggs. Pour into a well-greased pudding dish. Bake for one-half hour, in a 375-degree oven. Remove from oven, and set container in pan half-full of boiling water, until cool. Serve with wine sauce.

Wine Sauce

Boil together one and one-half cups sugar, and one-half cup water, for five minutes. Remove from fire, and add one teaspoon lemon or vanilla extract; three tablespoons of wine, and one tablespoon butter. Stir until butter is melted. This recipe can be used during the year; and brandy may be used instead of wine.

Mrs. S. Schachter,
4090 Clark Street, Montreal.

PASSOVER KNAIDLECH

one cup water
three-quarter cup matzoh meal salt and pepper to taste
one whole egg
one tablespoon chicken fat

Boil water, then stir in matzoh meal, and when it has all been mixed in, remove from flame immediately; add chicken fat, egg, salt and pepper and mix well. When this is cool, roll into balls (yields about nine or ten) and drop into boiling soup half an hour before serving. Cover with lid, and knaidlech should rise.

The Master Builder Of Liberal Judaism

Judaism, unlike other great religions, is not named for one man. No one personality in our faith occupies the centre of the stage. Judaism is a religion of the people whose souls find most sublime expression in great personalities in various ages and stages of Jewish history. These personalities or teachers have given to the faith reinterpretations and have kept the religious heritage alive and progressive.

Isaac M. Wise, whose 131st birthday has just been observed in Liberal Jewish congregations, was one of those great personalities who continued the mobility of Judaism and rescued it from staticism and petrification. His biography reads like a romance. He belongs in the realm of the pioneers and heroic pathfinders. Indeed, he was a prophet in his day and generation. Bohemian-born, he found his native land unsuitable for his rabbinic labours. Wise, the democrat and prophetic spirit, could not endure the narrowness of life there and the civil restrictions under which Jews were forced to live. He therefore dreamt of America, the land of promise.

In 1846, he came to American shores and soon became Rabbi at Albany, New York. But what disillusionment took hold of this teacher when he observed Jewish life in the land! Jews were divided and subdivided into factions. Their mode of behaviour was rather European. The ghetto life seemed to have been transplanted from European soil to that of America. Wise found that superstitions and ritualisms that no longer answered spiritual needs were covering the purity and nobility of the faith. The essences of Jewish life were pushed into the background.

Isaac M. Wise therefore dedicated himself to reform in order to make Judaism meaningful in the American democratic environment. Here, in America, he felt, the beauty of the Jewish faith, its humanity and its universality, could have a chance to flower. For, in this land, America, Judaism was legally recognized on an equal status with other faiths. Here, in this one great land, there was truly religious freedom, with no established church as such, to occupy a superior position. Wise, the builder anew, had to destroy the obsolete and the fetters that cramped Jewish life. Respecting Orthodoxy at all times, he laboured for a Judaism that was to be indigenous with the American environment.

Ah, the labours of the pioneer are seldom appreciated at the start! The burden of the prophet is hardship and suffering! What enmity Wise invited because of his humble reforms in Albany! One need only read his reminiscences to stand in admiration of this hero of the spirit. He was threatened by the dogmatists. He tells how he was attacked by them when about to deliver his address in the synagogue on Rosh Hashanah: "I step before the Ark in order to take out the Scrolls of the Law as usual to offer prayer. Spanier steps in my way and without saying a word, smites me, with his fist . . . This was the terrible signal for an uproar . . . 'Louis Spanier', said I to him, 'There is the law to which I can appeal.' 'I have a hundred thousand dollars more than you. I do not fear the law, I will ruin you'." Wise was arrested that day and the rabble, with delight, feasted their eyes on the sight of the rabbi in court.

A new congregation was founded in Albany with Isaac M. Wise as its leader. It flourished and stands today as Beth Emeth for the liberalism begun by their prophetic teacher. In 1854 Dr. Wise was invited to assume leadership in Cincinnati, and here he ministered almost a half a century and realized the fruits of his great labours. Wise will ever be known as the "master builder" of Reform Judaism in America. In Cincinnati, he founded the "American Israelite." This weekly had as its motto "Let there be Light."

I. M. Wise was a bearer of light within Jewry and without. Enlightenment he wanted for his people, enlightenment also for the non-Jew. In the latter part of the 19th century in America, Wise was the Jew's greatest interpreter to the non-Jew. Courageously, he defended Israel against the attacks of those who misunderstood Israel and Judaism. In order to bring unity into Jewish life he founded "The Union of American Hebrew Congregations." To crown his labours in the cause of synagogue, he founded The Hebrew Union College. He felt that the future of Jew and Judaism in America was bound up with an American-educated and trained rabbinate. Then, too, to strengthen the labours of the individual rabbi he called into existence the Central Conference of American Rabbis, today the largest and most influential rabbinical body in the world.

One shudders to think what might have been the fate of thousands of Jews and, in particular, of Judaism in North America had it not been for the vision and organizing genius of Isaac M. Wise. It is interesting to note that Wise, in his travels across the American Continent, visited our own Montreal in 1897. What brave souls must have been the small group of reformers who dared in those days to be hosts to Wise and his disciples. One can guess what were the reactions of our Montreal conservative friends when "rebels of the spirit" gathered in the city.

In our day we need to labour in the spirit of Wise. The war and post-war will call for a new order in all departments of life. Judaism, if it is to be meaningful, will have to consciously change much to meet the urgencies of a new day. Judaism must ever think in terms of world destiny. Precious as Palestine is for us, especially today, Judaism is a universal faith and not bound up merely with the historic homeland. Judaism's goal is in Jewish religious life. Our people must be re-educated everywhere in the faith. Rabbis must not permit themselves to be echoes of their congregations but rather must they be living voices in the cause of universal righteousness and ethical living. Thinking of Isaac M. Wise, we who are labourers in the vineyard of the Lord are encouraged to continue the battle of the Lord in this day and generation.

We Are Neglecting Our Own Children

BY RABBI NORMAN N. SHAPIRO, OF GOEL TZEDEC SYNAGOGUE, TORONTO, ONTARIO

We are neglecting our children. This may seem like a rash statement to make in the face of all the material things we enable our young ones to possess, but I speak of a much more serious neglect. That of the loss of companionship between parent and child. Our days fade into a maze of appointments and every day activities that simply place our children into the hands of others. We have to go to work in the morning and should the average parent count the hours he is with his child, or children during the day or evening, or even the week-end when it is most likely that the pursuits of the week slacken, he would probably be amazed at the results.

Business has taken up all available time. Our dinners at night are spent with business associates, our week-ends are planned around certain business appointments and tying up the loose ends of the week. So it naturally follows that one thing must be neglected in favor of another. There was a time when the family group congregated on the Sabbath. This to the children might have been an ordeal because there were so many "thou shalt nots" to observe. But today, children are given so much leeway by doting parents, that the parents don't realize that the one thing they really miss is the participation of the parent in the child's activities.

You buy the child an electric train, show him how to run it, and then leave him to run it himself or show it to his friends. His care is given over to nurses, maids and housekeepers. He is educated by the teacher, learns his manners at meal time and in front of company, and is expected to have the ideas and the training instilled in him through these very slight contacts with the parents.

This is too much to ask. Psychologists maintain that a four-hour minimum period through the day either in training or play should be shared by parents and children. Particularly children of school age. There are the few moments at the breakfast table. The family group at the dinner table. The hour or so spent with the parents after the dinner and of course the week-ends should find the family together either in play or education. I have purposely omitted the word "work". During the week days and evenings there should be time set aside for the various work periods. The Saturday and Sunday should signify companionship and mutual enjoyment. Contrary to what many people think, the child's spiritual education begins at home and is only intensified by the synagogue attendance. It is important for the child to know that he is a part of a tremendous circle of other children and parents who make their family worship a part of the pattern of their everyday lives.

You have often heard the expression that a family which prays together stays together. I cannot stress this too strongly, because it follows that a closely knit group remains that way through mutual interest and pursuits. I cannot set down any specific rules for the way to handle the individual problems that keep parents and children apart in a good many respects. There is the financial problem which keeps one or both parents occupied more than they would wish. There are the parents who feel that the sense of responsibilities can be assumed by seeing to it that the child has a competent nursemaid to watch and take charge of it. There are the parents who have more than two children and find that each one is a day's job and care in themselves.

I can fully appreciate all of these phases and problems, my own special kind among them, but there is a way to alleviate each one. If we cannot give them maximum time, let us give maximum attention in the time alloted to us. Make one hour a day count for three or four, and see to it that some special thing is planned for the child's week-end that will take it out of the run of the mill class and make the child look forward to and anticipate that planned time with the parents.

My main thought is to interject in the relationship of the parent and child the feeling of spiritual kinship as well as family attachment. Spiritual is a word that is almost too big to apply to children. I don't mean prayer, not entirely. I don't mean moral guidance, not entirely. I don't mean education, not entirely, and I don't mean story-telling in such a manner as we teach our children the history of our people and our Bible. I mean a combination of all, in such a way that the child can become cognizant of the attitudes of the parent and his surroundings and through emulating finally have an agreeable habit become as much of daily routine as washing his hands or tying his shoes.

Synagogue participation can become one of the links in the family activities. I have seen families file into the synagogue on a Sabbath morning and it is a thrill to watch them from the pulpit. I have heard parents say that the children have requested them to take them to the service, whether it be the junior service or the adult service. I have heard parents tell how children are up and dressed and waiting to be taken to Sunday or Religious School. I have heard parents tell how the children wish to attend any bar-mitzvah together with their parents on a Sabbath. I have heard children invite parents to a meeting of a synagogue youth group.

They take pride in the way you feel about their participation. Children feel parents reactions quickly and accurately. When the parent shows an intense sense of devotion to a cause, the children follow. If the time that you spend with your children is to be wisely alloted, then you will see that the planning includes and is built around what is most important to you both, your Judaism, and your basis and foundation for permanent attitudes for home and community.

OHIO RUBBER FIRM

est in the venture was based considerably on its significance as an important step in economic and other relations between the United States and Israel. He said the undertaking was outstanding as an example of self-help development.

Mr. Taubman said that capitalization of $2,900,000 was virtually complete and that stock ownership would be divided equally between the United States group and the participating subsidiaries and affiliates of the General Confederation of Jewish Labor in Israel (Histadruth). The plant is expected to be in operation in about a year, and eventually will have an annual output of 140,000 tires.

This will provide some portion for export to neighboring countries, and will be an important contribution to Israeli's economy, since most of the country's transportation is by highway. Site of the plant is at Hadera, thirty miles from Haifa, which has been described as the future "Detroit" of Israel. Arrangements for remittance of dividends was termed unusually attractive.
